The University of California is indeed "overpopulated by liberal professors" and "afflicted by a 'cancer of politicization.'" A Los Angeles Times tabulation found that the ratio of Democratic Party to Republican Party donations from UC employees to the 2008 Presidential campaign was 51 for the ten campuses combined and an astounding 80.4 for UC Berkeley.

I am the only outspoken conservative at the UCLA School of Public Health among about 200 faculty members. I have uncovered that several activist UC professors have exaggerated and misrepresented certain air pollution health effects in California. UCLA has not investigated this important scientific matter in accord with its Mission Statement and Whistleblower Protection policy. Instead, I am being terminated from the research faculty position that I have held with distinction since 1976. The Foundation for Individual Rights in Education (FIRE) strongly supports me: Google 'FIRE Enstrom' (<http://thefire.org/case/838.html>).

This diverse state of California should not continue to tolerate the domination and control of UC by liberals.
