Subject: clarification regarding media reports

Dear SPH Colleagues:

Recent reports in newspapers and blogs regarding James Enstrom of the UCLA School of Public Health have contained numerous misrepresentations. While it is not appropriate to discuss specifics because personnel matters are confidential, several points demand clarification.

Mr. Enstrom does not hold a professorial or other faculty appointment. His appointment is in the non-faculty researcher series at the UCLA School of Public Health, a position funded by research grants from external organizations and not subsidized by state support for faculty salaries. Individuals in this series are appointed for fixed terms that are renewable subject to established departmental and university review procedures; there is no tenure possible in this series.

Decisions not to reappoint individuals in the professional research series are based on academic department review. The nature of research results, political views or popularity are not appropriate factors and are not considered when evaluating individuals for reappointment. All individuals who are not recommended for reappointment in this series are provided with the opportunity to grieve the decision through the appropriate University mechanisms.

Best,
Hilary
